Dear Hiring Manager:

With a BSCS and a track record of successfully managing embedded software projects, I am now seeking an opportunity to improve capabilities and ensure compliance at an organization such as yours. Having built productive relationships with key stakeholders, I am confident I can immediately become a valuable asset to your team.

My expertise in embedded coding, architecture and design descriptions as well as various development practices can deliver a competitive advantage. A sample of my accomplishments includes:

- Consistently receiving 100% customer satisfaction and government audit approvals on projects.
- Building cooperative client and coworker relationships and inspiring cooperation between cross-functional groups.
- Inventing innovative embedded software architecture and leading detailed design and implementation initiatives.
- Gaining thorough understanding of real-time operating systems, in-circuit emulators and expanding object-oriented architecture skills.

This letter and the enclosed resume serve as an introduction to my skills and qualifications. However, I would welcome the opportunity to discuss the expertise I offer in greater detail.

Please feel free to contact me to schedule an interview. Thank you for your consideration; I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Sincerely,

David Mayer
